

5 digital safety tips for parents

Know your privacy settings

and check them periodically because they can change without warning. Is it public, for friends, or totally private?

Turn off camera location services

so people can't track where your photos are taken. Like, in your home. Eek! Review all geolocation services/apps in your settings.

Don't use your kids in your social profile pic

We know, we know, you are proud of them and, they are beautiful. But, it is your profile photo. Of YOU. So yeah

Look at what can be inferred from photos

School logo on his shirt? Street number above your kid's head on the front porch? Always take a picture at the same park at the same time of day? Take a step back from your photo habits to take a look at what a spooky outsider might see

Keep open lines of communication as your children get older

Monitor and communicate. Sexting, Cyberbullying, Responsible posting . . . These are all concepts our parents didn't have to address with us, but we must stay on top of and address with our children and check them periodically because they can change without warning. Is it public, for friends, or totally private?

5 digital safety tips for parents

Know your privacy settings

Turn off camera location services

so people can't track where your photos are taken. Like, in your home. Eek! Review all geolocation services/apps in your settings.

Don't use your kids in your social profile pic

We know, we know, you are proud of them and, they are beautiful. But, it is your profile photo. Of YOU. So yeah

Look at what can be inferred from photos

School logo on his shirt? Street number above your kid's head on the front porch? Always take a picture at the same park at the same time of day? Take a step back from your photo habits to take a look at what a spooky outsider might see

Keep open lines of communication as your children get older

Monitor and communicate. Sexting, Cyberbullying, Responsible posting . . . These are all concepts our parents didn't have to address with us, but we must stay on top of and address with our children